Daily Bulletin

FRIDAY, JULY 10, 1891.

The Waikiki bridge gets to praise these days from the people it carries over to the Park. They say the dust is inches deep on it, covering up spots that are dangerously weak. No doubt the Road Supervisor has only to have his attention called to the bridge to have it put in good condition. Next Legislature should provide for a more permanent structure as well as the widening of the bridge. Safe access to Kapiolani Park is constantly becoming a more important matter, as lots are being taken up and the fine pleasure ground is increasingly sought for recreation.

The Pioneer Building & Loan Association of Honolulu appears to have made a satisfactory start in its first year. It has received $29,000 and loaned $28,000 in round numbers. The money loaned will have results in homes of their own for the borrowing members. This is an institution that was a little late in appearing here, but it is a satisfaction to believe that thus far ability and prudence have characterized its management. The history of similar institutions elsewhere has been blotted by some scandalous collapses, and these should be a warning to members not to allow the affairs of the Association ever to drift into any the least degree of looseness.

THAT CANAL AND THIS HARBOR.

Mr. Warner Miller, president of the construction company that has the contract for the Nicaragua Canal, lately delivered an enthusiastic lecture in San Francisco on the subject of that great work. He was visiting the Pacific Coast to solicit financial assistance for the enterprise. He said he was not there for any great sum of money, but he did count on the moral support of the people. The information he gave about the progress of the work was very interesting. Since he had taken charge a year ago, the company had made a harbor at Greytown, opening to traffic the harbor that had been closed for twenty-five years. Half a mile of the canal had been excavated to a depth of seventeen feet and 207 feet wide. Of the 170 miles total length of the canal only 27 miles are to be excavations. The rest is free navigation on the San Juan river and Lake Nicaragua. The climate has proved quite favorable to the health of the Americans engaged on the canal. Trade winds blow regularly, driving off malaria. The temperature never goes above 90, nor below 65 degrees. There are no problems remaining to puzzle the engineers—nothing but to lay out the work and have it done.

These things are very encouraging for an early completion of the canal, even allowing that Mr. Miller's interest has colored the facts somewhat. What concerns Honolulu is to have the harbor dredged so as to be ready for its share in the expansion of commerce in the Pacific inevitable on the opening of the canal. There is the most reasonable probability at this date that such a state of readiness will be realized far in advance of that particular occasion. There are other considerations, however, which will save our harbor improvement from being premature, no matter how soon accomplished. Many great ocean steamships on other routes than the canal one will shortly give us the option of either accommodating them at our wharves or letting them sail majestically past beyond our horizon. Even now the place loses a great advantage when a large warship visits us and has to anchor in the heaving roadstead, while much annoyance and loss of time and trade is occasioned frequently when large American-Chinese liners call without being able to come inside.

Adolph Sutro is trying the experiment of raising cinchona trees at his grounds above the Cliff house. It is from the bark of about a dozen varieties of this tree that quinine is extracted, and if they will thrive in this climate the trees will become very valuable. Moreover, the cinchona is a very showy tree and highly ornamental, some of them growing to a height of eighty feet. The enormous medicinal consumption of the bark of the cinchona has caused the tree to be extensively cultivated in India and Java. It grows in high altitudes in New Grenada, Ecuador, Peru and Bolivia, where there is a great deal of moisture. It has been tried with success in Australia, near the seacoast, and Mr. Sutro thinks some of the varieties will grow here, where there is a moisture in the atmosphere all the year round.—San Francisco Examiner.

THE WIDOW AND ORPHAN'S FRIEND.

The following copy of a letter from Tong Shee, the widow of the late Chang Mow Keong of this city, speaks for itself in this connection:

HONOLULU, July 3, 1891. A. J. CARTWRIGHT, Esq., Agent Equitable Life Assurance Society, Honolulu. Dear Sir—I wish to thank you for the promptness shown by your Society in the settlement of the claim of my late husband Chang Mow Keong for $7000.00. The Society's draft for that amount was received by me to-day. I take pleasure in recommending your company to those who may wish to insure as an extremely reliable one. Yours very truly, TONG SHEE.
